

A hen, a dog and some chicks lived on a farm. One day, the chicks were hungry. The hen went out to look for some food for her children. A sly fox saw the hen. He took a bag and followed the hen. He wanted to have a chicken sandwich, some chicken soup and barbecued chicken for his dinner. The fox asked the hen, "Are you looking for some food? I have some in my bag." The hen curiously looked into the bag and then the fox pushed the hen into the bag. The fox ran home with the bag. He felt excited but tired. So he fell asleep.

On the farm, the chicks were crying because they were very hungry. The dog was worried about the hen and went out to look for her. He sniffed and sniffed. Finally, he found the fox's house. He saw the hen trapped inside the bag. He tried to get her out. He opened the bag and saved the hen. The dog and the hen threw the fox into a pot of boiling water together. The fox jumped out and ran away. On the way home, a friendly farmer gave a bag of grain to the dog and the hen. They took the grain home. The chicks felt happy to see their mother and the dog. They ate the grain and lived a happy life ever after.